Four of the new hotels in the CV Travel collection are 5* properties, all with exceptional history and a focus on service and cuisine, with the fifth, the Polurrian Bay Hotel in Mullion, Cornwall, being selected for its excellent seaside location and family facilities.

CV Travel's Jacqui Larkin said "CV Travel is well known for its unrivaled collection of villas, worldwide, and in recent years we've added luxury and boutique hotels Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. In selecting hotels we use the same criteria as we do for our villas, visiting each of them before we add them to our collection, to ensure that they have something really outstanding about them. This can be their location, their history, their facilities, or more often than not, a combination of several factors.

The new British and Irish hotels are among the most individual and exceptional properties to be found anywhere and we know that our clients are going to really appreciate these fabulous additions".
